Duty Status Reporting

*SSgt Noel Gutierrez, AF Duty Status Program Manager
HQ AFPC/DPWRROP*

Why We Report Duty Status And What It's Used For?

AFPC

- Duty status reporting gives the Active Duty, Guard, and Reserve a means to report and track the availability of the Air Force.
- Allowing commanders at all levels to determine who meets mission requirements.

- AFPC uses Duty Status to:
  - Validate assignments,
  - Monitor “bad” duty status’s which generate lost time,
  - Evacuation/Repatriation (i.e. Sep 11th, Turkey, natural disasters)
  - Requests for senior officers

Problem!!

- Currently we are only accounting for 61% of our AF members (Active Duty, Guard & Reserve)

- Misconception is that duty status reporting is only about TDY's. Any AF member who is not at their current home station, working their current job needs to be reported as a change in duty status (i.e. hospital, leave, confinement, jury duty, home station PME)

Solution!!

- Gain your Commander's support
- Have a solid program (don't forget about your GSU's)
- Have a program manager back up
- Use AFI 36-2134 and guidance provided on our website
http://www.afpc.randolph.af.mil/readiness/Duty\_Status.htm
- Give us feedback on what works and what doesn't

What To Expect From The Future Of Duty Status

- Up to date guidance as our program enhances
- One system for orders
- System automation
- Less human interaction

Bottom Line

AFPC

Our end objective is to deliver accurate, accountable Personnel support to our customers and commanders. New and ongoing developments in technology, formal PERSCO training, and operations guidance means today's Personnelists will be equally and fully equipped for every readiness challenge. Additionally, updates to career field management make readiness skills a core element in skill-level upgrades and promotion glide paths.
